

Comfort and Entertainment

When you go out for your entertainment you usually leave your comfort at home. If you knew that you could combine all the comforts of your home with all the entertainment you derive from the Opera, concert, theatre or vaudeville, how often would you go out?

the EDISON Phonograph

In your home supplies better and more varied entertainment than you could get if you went to a show or a concert every night in the week. You don't sit on an uncomfortable theatre seat and think how you could enjoy yourself if you were comfortable. You are comfortable, and you do enjoy it—every minute of it.

With the Edison Phonograph it's just like having your own theatre, your own Opera company, your own orchestra and band right in your home.

Conference of Democratic Chiefs.
Hot Springs, Ark., March 30.—Charles F. Murphy and Phil Donohue, respectively chief and treasurer of the Tammany organization, left tonight for New York, after a month spent here in active conference with other men interested in the future national democratic ticket. Chairman Norman K. Mack, of the democratic committee, will have two new guests to-morrow, in National Committeemen

Tate Brady of Oklahoma, and Sapp of Kansas, who with Colonel Thompson, also of the national committee, will hold a conference. After that the conference will be shifted to French Lick, Ind., where the first week in April a majority of the national committee will meet with Chairman Mack, outlining a congressional campaign.

SIBERIAN EXILE SYSTEM TO END SHAME OF WORLD FOR CENTURIES

The end of the Russian Siberian exile system is in sight.

With only a bare $31,500 to pay expenses which have called heretofore for as much as $7,000,000 yearly, and the action of the Russian duma in cutting down the appropriation, the system is bound to become a hideous memory. The appalling inquisition that has lasted for more than four centuries is doomed.

The history of Siberia for several centuries has been one of blood and tears. The practice of sending dangerous criminals and the enemies of autocracy to the Siberian wilds was instituted by Ivan the Terrible, who banished not only officials suspected of harboring revolutionary principles, but also priests who refused to sanction his acts of terror.

The practice thus begun has been followed by subsequent monarchs down to the present time. Many of the most prominent and patriotic members of the nobility, and writers of international fame have endured the horrors of Siberian banishment to return to their families and friends physical and mental wrecks if the rigors of their punishment did not end in a merciful death.

According to documents communicated to the duma by the police department, the number of exiles in Siberia is about 74,000. The Russian premier, Stolypin, once told an English journalist that the administration exiles, that is, those banished by the government, numbered only about 12,000, but little credence was placed on the statement. During the last revolution those exiled reached a total of 15,500, classified as follows: Workingmen, 6,362; peasants, 3,879; students, 340; teachers, 792; tradesmen, 755; officials of the zemstvo, 315; unknown, 2,857. These figures show that the government's wrath extended far beyond the original limits, for while formerly the administration exiles were made up largely of students and persons of the educated classes, the bulk of them recently had been made up of workingmen and peasants.

A mother who went into exile to accompany her young daughter, writes: "I have followed my daughter, condemned to exile for life in Siberia, with the intention of softening the conditions of her long journey. Most of the exiles, having spent something like two years or more in prison before coming to a trial, are quite exhausted by the hard prison treatment. They are dressed in long rough coats and heavy, ill-fitting shoes, and have to carry the rest of their clothing on their backs in sacks weighing about thirty pounds.

"During the part of the journey which is made by train, men and women are put together in the cars under the supervision of wardens and soldiers. These men are accustomed to regard the prisoners as having no rights and therefore to treat them as they choose.

"For women this journey is awful. In one railway car were three women among a lot of ordinary criminals, and when the commanding officer wanted to chain them in pairs he did not hesitate to fetter a woman to a man and to keep them thus for a great part of the journey.

"In the car with my daughter was a party of women exiled for not having passports. Most of them were of the lowest type. The soldiers drank with them, and my daughter, being in their company, had to witness outrageous scenes. When they came to the place of exile they were left in some little village, usually hundreds of miles from the small district towns. It is impossible for exiles to find work or earn anything. I have spent a month with my daughter in one of these villages and I have seen nothing but worn faces of men vainly going about in search of work."

"The government allowance to these exiles was until January, 1908, $1.65 a month. But since then it has been reduced to 30 cents. However, only the administrative exiles receive that allowance. Those exiled by courts get nothing. The communes of the villages to which they are sent are bound to give them some food, but as the exiles have no tools and no cattle and most of them are townpeople they starve.

Amid such misery the only bright feature is that the political exiles do everything possible to maintain each other's courage and prevent demoralization. They have organized societies for mutual help, to which every one who gets any money from home contributes. In one of the remote settlements of the Obdorsk region five exiles ended their lives by suicide last January.—Kansas City Journal.

To Locate Texas Boundary.

Guthrie, Okla., March 29.—The 100th meridian, which should be the state line between Oklahoma and Texas Panhandle, is again being surveyed and the case in litigation to decide the exact boundary line will come up before the present month.
